Jackson Hole, Wyoming is what the West is all about. Cowboys still saddle up their horses before dawn to tend to chores, and wild elk, bison and moose still roam the land. The town of Jackson is like a scene out of an old western movie, with wooden plank sidewalks, old-time stagecoach stops, elk antler arches adorning the town square and plenty of wild west saloons. Jackson is full of great shops, fine art galleries and a variety of restaurants and watering holes. Then there's the skiing. Although best known for its vertical drop of over 4,000 feet, Jackson Hole is also legendary for powder runs, breathtaking views and terrain to suit everyone. There are 2,500 acres of slopes and runs, and that doesn't include the back country. When not skiing or enjoying the town, you can snowshoe into Grand Teton National Park, snowmobile into Yellowstone National Park, swim the Granite Hot Springs, or view the incredible National Elk herd on a sleigh ride.

LODGING: The Forty-Niner Inn is located in downtown Jackson Hole, a few blocks from the Town Square and just steps from many shops, bars and restaurants. Lodging amenities include complimentary continental breakfast, indoor/outdoor hot tubs, and complimentary transportation to and from Jackson Hole Mountain Resort.
